FOREIGN TRADE IN AMERICA

Imports And Exports
Increase Sharply.

NEW YORK EXPERTS PREDICT
FURTHER STIMULATION.

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received April 28, 8.37 a.m.)

Washington, To-day.
America's foreign trade increased sharply in March.

The indices of import values were the highest since 1931.
Exports were valued at U.S.$190,000,000, as compared with U.S.$163,000,000 in February.

General imports were U.S.$168,
000,000 as against U.S.$133,000,000.
The gains are attributed to the longer month and the usual seasonal increase.—United Press, per S.C.
Gold Bar Co.

Messrs. Dun and Bradstreet,
the New York market experts,
in their weekly report, state that the trade recovery is continuing its pace indicating further stimulation in the months ahead.

It is pointed out that where business is retarded, the condition is traceable to unseasonable weather and legislative delays.—United Press

U.S. SILVER INSPECTION AS WEAPON

Wall Street's Opinion
Of Government Move.

ADVOCATES' INTERESTS
SIGNIFICANT

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received April 28, 8.37 a.m.)

Washington, To-day.
With a few exceptions the American silver inspection showed that the silver holdings are normal business transactions, thus dispelling the belief that huge gambling would be revealed.

Silver agitation is confusing the market and many large dealers are purchasing short future contracts to protect regular holdings against fluctuations.

Wall Street now regards the silver list as significant inasmuch as it contained the names of some advocates legislation.

It is believed that henceforth it will be most difficult to push legislation because the Government may possibly develop the feeling that the silver advocates are intending to further their own position thereby.

Wall Street is also intentionally released the names of use as a weapon against silver supporters and inflationists.—United Press, per S.C.

BIG SILVER PURCHASES IN THE ORIENT

Observers' Estimates
Say 5,000,000 Ounces.

PRICES FIRMER IN NEW YORK

New York, To-day.
Silver prices firmed up after an irregular opening on the New York market, yesterday. Buying was credited to European and Far Eastern accounts, which disclosed
a limited supply of offerings.

Some observers ventured the opinion that Asiatic interests had acquired at least 5,000,000 ounces of silver during the past few days.

On the stock market, industries and bonds advanced .09 and .11 to 103.65 and 94.93, respectively, while rails and utilities declined .04 and .03 to 49.28 and 25.60, respectively. The commodity index was up .51 to 50.82.

Business was dull, 840,000
shares being traded.

In their market report, Messrs.
E. A. Pierce and Company,
through their local correspondents, Messrs. Asia Lands, Ltd.,

"Stocks were held within a narrow range. The tone was firmer than yesterday. Outside interest was at a minimum and evidently there was no incentive on either side."

(Tables on Page 14).

Silver Prices Show Advance.

New York, To-day.
Silver prices advanced on the New York Commodity Exchange yesterday, the May price closing at 43.55 cents per ounce, as against 43.00 to 43.15 cents per ounce on Thursday.

The December price improved from 44 cents per ounce to 44.50 and 44.60 cents.

STABILISATION OF CURRENCIES

Time Not Ripe For General Action.

I.C.I. DIRECTOR'S VIEWS

London, To-day.

Discussing the stabilisation of currencies before the conference of the Chartered Institute of Secretaries, the well-known economist, Dr. W. H. Coates, Director of Imperial Chemical Industries, said that the time did not appear to be ripe for general stabilisation on the basis of a return to the international gold standard.

There had not been time for depreciation of currencies in non-gold countries, or for devaluation of the dollar, combined with the liberal credit policy that was being followed in many countries, to work out fully their effect prices and costs.

Reparations and war debts still cast their shadows, he said.

Surplus production and stocks were still evident in regard to the number of world staples. Co-operative, restrictive agreements with, or without, Government support had not reached full development and a forest of international trade barriers still grew strongly.

FIRM STAND IN EUROPE

BRITAIN AND FRANCE TAKE
GRAVE VIEW

INABILITY PLEA
DISREGARDED.

TRANSFER MORATORIUM
OPPOSITION

Berlin, To-day.

The French Ambassador to Berlin, following the lead of Sir Eric Phipps, the British Ambassador, has informed the German Government that France will take a grave view of the proposal to apply the transfer moratorium to the Dawes and Young loans.

In other words, Great Britain and France expect the reparations payments to be continued despite the assertions of the President of the Reichsbank, Dr. H. Schacht,
that Germany cannot any longer
find the annual $23,000,
000 necessary.

Simultaneously Germany's foreign creditors are assembled at the Reichsbank to discuss the transfer problem. Although the deliberations technically do not include the Dawes and Young bonds, it is not doubted that their decisions will automatically affect them.

The conference is divided into two sub-committees and will continue deliberations today.

They appear determined to take a firm stand against a complete transfer moratorium on the Dawes and Young loans.

Ladies Of Fashion In Washington Crepe And Satin Popular

Washington. The youthful Senora de Espil, wife of the ambassador from Argentina, attended an evening reception in a smart tomato-red crepe gown flecked with gold, cut long and sweeping with a girde outlined in gold.

Mrs. Harold Russek attended a dance at the Cuban embassy in a severely plain black crepe dress trimmed with a collar of white organdie fashioned in long, thin strips to resemble coq feathers.

Mme. Osias, wife of the resident commissioner from the Philippines, attracted much attention at a dinner dance, wearing a shimmering white satin that swirled about her coral-coloured slippers. Her long coral ear-rings repeated the colour note.

Departing from her usual blue, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is wearing a new evening gown of pale peach-coloured satin which is trimmed with an emerald ornament. She wears emerald-green slippers with the gown and carries a tiny bag of the same colour.

The slim Mme. Mosicki, wife of the secretary to the Polish embassy, wears an evening gown of shell-pink chiffon made with ruffled sleeves and trimmed with a matching velvet sash.

Mrs. Curtis Dall, daughter of the President, wears a dance frock of tangerine-coloured crepe on which a soft, graceful scarf drapes across the throat in front and flares in back to a long, double cape effect.

Mrs. Camilo Osias, wife of the Philippine delegate to congress, caused a flurry at a White House reception by wearing one of the picturesque gowns of her native country, made of coral-coloured pinu cloth with a high pleated ruff at the neckline.

Alice Roosevelt Longworth has an evening gown of a new fabric, "stained glass chiffon." A rich and elaborate design in deep gold, blue and red is worked into a black chiffon background. The gown is made simply with a short train.

For public dinners Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has a gown of mirror satin made with a high neck and long sleeves that widen slightly above the elbow. Small triangles of brilliants are set at either side of the bateau neckline.

Commissioner of Immigration Marj Ward, of Boston, attended a tea here in a royal blue crepe with applique of silver cloth on the puffed sleeves. She wore a small "bell-hop" hat of gray crepe trimmed with a small blue veil.

Mrs. Jovett Shouse, wife of the former chairman of the national democratic committee, received at a late afternoon tea in her home wearing a severely plain black chiffon velvet gown with a spray of single gardenias pinned to the shoulder.

Feather Fashion

A new fashion fad that has caught on in Hollywood is the white feather "necklace" which adorns the formal afternoon or dinner frock. Here is Jean Howard displaying the new vogue. Her necklace is mounted on bands of gleaming brilliants on a black velvet frock. Feathered cuffs match the necklace.

Crisp Collars For Spring

Muslin Jabots Are Important.

"LINGERIE" SETS

New suits should ruffle it with the best this spring. A definite part of every woman's dress allowance will, if she is wise, be put apart for the crisp pique collars and muslin jabots which will be a very important part of her outfit.

This will be economical, too, for it will be found that last season's frocks respond marvelously to the treatment of this season's collar.

Most of the new jabots, of course, need a tiny stand-up collar to keep them neat. But if the dress is not made with a collar of the semi-military type, over which this can be fitted, have a narrow muslin band, fitting flat over the frock, sewn beneath the stand-up one. This will hold the collar of the jabot in place, and prevent an unsightly gap from appearing between it and the dress.

By the way, some of the fluted jabots and collars which look so attractive when they are new are apt to lose that crisp appearance after washing. This is not necessarily because they are badly washed, but because of clumsy ironing. A golfing iron which will press the frill back into its own shape may be of help in this case.

Do not imagine that this sort of thing looks well only on dark dresses. Almost any simple coloured frock is the better for a touch of fresh pique or muslin at the neck. The "Queen Christina" set, which has been inspired by the Garbo film will, however, be best worn with a black or dark blue frock which is absolutely plain. The wide collar and long cuffs provide all the trimming needed.

The beauty of these "lingerie" sets, of course, is that it can be whipped off one in the middle of the day and refresh your frock by putting on another, and totally different one, in the afternoon.

WATTEAU HATS WORN COQUETTISHLY

Multi-Coloured Berets
Become Popular.

WHITE WOOD POCHETTES

The Watteau hat, tilted right forward, coquettishly straight over the eyes, can either display curls at the back or a useful substitute of feathers, flowers or ribbon loops if curls are temporarily or permanently absent.

The "tea-tray" hats, cut perfectly square and with crowns so shallow that they give, set straight upon the head, an effect of a tray precariously balanced, are mostly made in white pique. The borders of the brim are folded over in a hem.

The beret has become a hardy annual. It is fastened down in front with a smart new pin, pulled well over to one side and made in multi-colourings these days. It is fashioned in straw, cotton or wool, but the good old felt is still the most popular.

Handbags are now made in the new white wood, bordered and fastened with gilt. They look well with a black suit and a white and gold button-hole should go with them. Some of these white wood pochettes are trimmed with black patent; they finish a black and white ensemble and complement a cap of half-white and half-black petersham that generally has a winged ornament.

Stainless Steel Used For Dining-Table.

Stainless steel is being increasingly used for the kitchen and the dining-table. Although expensive, it lasts a lifetime. Most dishes and covers made from it give an old-fashioned dignity to the table.

This may, perhaps, sound a little trying to wear in the tropics but it is decidedly battling and has a romantic air which contrasts most charmingly with the cropped heads of not-so-long-ago.

Home-Made Cushion Covers

Important Accessories
For Spring.

CUSHIONS and their covers are important accessories in spring furnishing renewal schemes, for these decorative trifles can bestow a final note of luxury, sedate or brilliant in colour as the case may be. The really "fussy" looking cushion is out of date this season. Cushions are chosen for their softness, covers for their artistic charm. Squares and small pillow shapes are among the most popular of the newer designs.

Frills and fringes are restrained in width. A narrow fluting, plait or roll of the same material as the cover is preferred. Galloon braid or piping is also used as an edging. Cushions can be highly expensive in furnishing accessories. On the other hand, the clever needlewoman, with very little effort, can create charming and artistic cushion covers herself.

FORWARD TILTED HATS POPULAR.

Diadem Model.

The off-the-face hat has not displaced the forward tilted model from favour. "Only the very young," said one fashion expert the other day, "wish to display the whole of the forehead. Older women prefer to conceal their brains—perhaps because they have more!" However, that may be, the fact remains that the over-the-eye slant is still smart and popular in these days of halo, the diadem and the jaunty Breton sailor. In the evening, the diadem hat or head-dress certainly holds the field—and its success is deserved. The favour, its evening counterpart of the moment consists of a smooth plait circling the head, placed well back from the forehead; immediately behind and above the plait rises a diadem or halo of metal or stiffened lame.

ST. JOSEPH'S PROTEST AGAINST POLICE

To Be Considered On Monday.

ROBERTSON'S APPEAL FOR WRONG DECISION

The protest by St. Joseph's against the Police for playing an unregistered player will be considered on Monday next, it was mentioned at a meeting of the Council of the Hong Kong Football Association held last evening.

St. Joseph's, in their protest against the playing of Rose, requested a re-play or the two point for the match, which was drawn.

The Police explanation was that the registration of the player had been overlooked owing to pressure of work.

An objection by L. G. Robertson against the referee's decision in awarding a penalty against him on the allegation that he struck a player was also brought before the Council. Robertson denied it and considered that it was a slur on his reputation.

The matter, after some discussion, was referred to the Referees' Committee for their report.

Hocquard Leaving.

It was announced at the meeting that Lieut. J. H. Hocquard, the Interport and Lincolnshire Regiment left wing, would be leaving the Colony towards the end of next week and would not, in all probability, be returning.

Lieut. Hocquard, in a letter to the Council, suggested that as Capt. F. R. Williams was still away, Lieut. D. R. Wilson should be elected to the Council to fill the vacancy caused by Lieut. Hocquard's departure.

It was agreed that Lieut. Wilson be invited to join the Council.

Points Forfeited.

Mr. H. K. Lee on behalf of the Chinese Athletic agreed that his team forfeit league points to the Royal Artillery, the Royal Navy and the East Lancashire Regiment against whom they had failed to field a team.

The explanations advanced by the Chinese Athletic were accepted by the Council who allowed the matter to drop with the forfeiture of the points.

Far Eastern Games.

In connection with the arrangements for the exhibitions in which the Japanese Olympic teams are to figure, it was proposed by the Council that a sub-committee be appointed to attend to the football match. Messrs. R. Hall, H. K. Lee and W. Prye were appointed to form the sub-committee.

It is understood that Enid Wilson's entry for the British Women's Golf Championship, of which she is the holder, was refused because of instructional articles which she wrote thus infringing her amateur status.

ONG CHENG SU SETS 2 NEW MARKS TO WIN VICTOR LUDORUM

MANCHUKUO AND BERLIN GAMES IN 1936

Permission To Enter Sought

POSSIBILITY OF CLAIMS BEING FORTIFIED

Berlin, April 22. The government of the new Japanese-supported state of Manchukuo, it was reported here to-day, will ask permission to take part in the 1936 World Olympic games.

Manchukuo, then but a few months old, was not in a position to press for participation in the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles, but its demands, pressed by Japan, threatened to disrupt this year's Tenth Far Eastern Olympics at Manila.

No country but Japan has granted diplomatic recognition to the new state but there have been rumours such a step is planned shortly by other powers, including Germany and Poland. In such event Manchukuo's claims might be fortified.—Associated Press.

POLE VAULTER RESIGNS.

Effect Of Manchukuo's Exclusion

Tokyo, April 23. The issue of Manchukuo's entry into the tenth Far Eastern Olympic games at Manila next month was revived, here to-day when Shuhei Nishida announced he would not take part because of his resentment at the exclusion of athletes of the Japanese-supported state.

Nishida is Japan's premier pole vaulter who met with success in the 1932 world Olympics at Los Angeles.

Manchukuo sympathisers are continuing their agitation among the athletes, trying to persuade others not to participate at Manila. The Japanese athletes are scheduled to sail this week end from Kobe.

MONEY CALLS AWAY ANOTHER AMATEUR

Lee Now Professional Billiards Player.

London, Apr. 17. For the fourth year in succession, Sidney Lee has won the amateur billiards title, beating F. Edwards by 420 at Thurston's. The final scores were:—Lee, 3,223; Edwards, 3,609. By his victory, Lee equalled the record of H. C. Vorr, also a four-times winner.

Lee will not have the opportunity of beating this record, as he is to turn professional immediately. "I feel sorry that I am leaving the amateur ranks," he said, "though I hope that I may do my part well in the other game."—Reuter.

HAMMOND'S MOOD

Hammond has changed very little; I never saw a great player who was so little affected by his surroundings. Whatever the occasion may be, the manner of Hammond's batting is determined by his mood. He does not go for the runs because runs are needed, but because it is his wish to hit the ball hard; he does not dig himself in because caution is necessary, but because he is following the promptings of his own genius. A wayward player, and none the worse for that, Hammond is the outstanding personality among modern batsmen, and we have every reason to be grateful for him.—Howard Marshall.

TO-DAY'S RACE MEETING.

ABLE AMAZON NOT STARTING?

(BY RAPIER)

MESSRS. LI and Li's Don, ridden by Mr. Ip, is likely to be dangerous in the first race. He looks like securing a place in spite of King's Justice improvement.

BUDGE (Mr. Black) is a very good outsider for the second race, and Monoplane will require watching.

MR. BUTLER is not taking out Able Amazon in the third race, but Bobnik Star at 145 lb. is not a bad thing at all.

GAY Butterfly (Mr. Soares), Hey Tor (Mr. Proulx), Iron Grey (Mr. Deitz), and Helter Skelter are the best ponies in the fifth race. Amoy may prove a good outsider.

FIVE furlongs is Sarabande's distance, and a good start will probably see this pony win. Mr. Yue Shun Wa on the Carp, however, is considered the good thing. Kindo is unlikely to start.

IF Princess Angeline reacts well under Mr. Proulx in the eighth race she will cut up the track to win comfortably. She will be receiving 20 lb. from Atlas!

TUMMEL may be worth backing both ways in the last race. Racing Boy is a doubtful starter.

MR. "Sammy Judah" is not likely to ride to-day.

HYDROPLANE, the Derby winner, may not start in the St. George's Plate. I understand the pony is giving signs of tiredness.

INTER-SCHOOL SPORTS.

The high jump was very disappointing. San Chung Kin (Wah Yan), the winner, clearing only 5 ft. 2 ins. Cheung Sing (Ying Wah), who came second, had the better style. W. Chen (St. Joseph's) had hard luck in not coming third, his shorts knocking the bar down twice. The third place resulted in a tie between W. Chen (St. Joseph's) Ong Cheng Su (D.B.S.) and So Kau Shui (St. Paul's).

D. Singh (Queen's) won the 1,500 metres from E. Petrove (St. Joseph's) by about 50 yards. He ran unplaced for three laps, but in the last lap he won as he pleased.

Five Hurdles Down.

Chan Yuk (Wah Yan) ran a good race in the 110 metres High Hurdles, which he did in 19 sec. S. Lee (Queen's) secured second place, after knocking down five hurdles.

The relay race was won in fine style by D.B.S. who led all the way. Fung Shing Chee, the 400 metres runner, gave them a lead of about 10 yds. Chui Kai Choh, who ran next, lost about five yards to C. Amery (St. Joseph's), but the D.B.S. lead was lengthened by Ong Cheng Su who was 8 yds. ahead of J. Alves (La Salle) when he handed over the baton to Tam Pang Hoal. Tam made full use of his lead to enlarge it to fifteen yards. H. Souza (La Salle), however, was catching up, but he kept his sprint until it was too late and lost by five yards in a race which provided the fourth record of the day.

In his speech at the conclusion of the prize giving Mr. G. R. Sayer congratulated the winners, remarking on their surprise success. The Governor's Shield, which was presented to the winners, was held last year by St. Joseph's College.

THREE ELEPHANTS IN GARDEN.Exciting Incident In England.

"Police send someone up here at once; There is a herd of elephants in the garden."

This message was received over the telephone at High Wycombe (Bucks) police station early one day last month. Three circus elephants, which were being driven from Amersham to Chesham, had entered the garden in front of Wyndcroft, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Syred.

It was some time before the keepers managed to steer two of the elephants through the gateway into the road. The third held out until the keeper tempted it through the gate with a carrot.

Mrs. Syred's maid thought the incident "quite exciting." "It is not often," she said, "that I get awakened by an elephant banging on the front door with his trunk."

FUTURE OF RANELAGH AT STAKERoyal Family Withdraws Patronage.*WORLD-FAMOUS CLUB SENSATION

The fate of Ranelagh, the most famous and certainly most exclusive social and sporting club in the world, is in the balance.

Is it to retain the tradition under which it has reached such eminence as the finest country house club in existence or, in the words of one of its members, "is it to degenerate to something little better than one of the road houses so popular in the United States for the purpose of earning dividends for the company which owns it?"

For years Ranelagh was honoured by the King's patronage. That has now been withdrawn, and every member of the Royal Family has severed connection with the club.

The royal members included the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York (who was chairman of the general committee), the Duke of Gloucester, Prince George, and the Duke of Connaught.

Sir George Hastings, who has strongly commented on certain developments at the club, has ceased to be chairman, though he remains a director.

Long-Standing Dispute

Other resignations have also taken place. The Duke of Beaufort, the Earl of Lonsdale, Lord Trenchard, Air Marshal Sir John Salmond, Admiral Sir Roger Keyes, M.P., Admiral Sir Herbert King-Hall, Major-General Sir John Hanbury-Williams, and Sir Francis E. Astley-Corbett are among those who have resigned from the general committee.

They have, it is stated, taken this action because the newly constituted board of the owning company has, in effect taken on itself the functions of the committee.

The unrest which has brought this crisis in the affairs of the club began six or seven years ago, when a member's desire to become a director was not satisfied, owing to a decision that a vacancy on the board should, in view of the club's close association with the reigning House, be filled by someone in close touch with the Court.

The development of affairs found Sir George Hastings and Mr. John Carlisle, the largest shareholders in Ranelagh Club, Limited, with conflicting ideas.

Then, in 1932, came the appointment of what was described as an Economy Committee. In its report the committee indicated several administrative matters which it considered should be altered, but it also paid a warm tribute to the work of Sir George Hastings.

Shareholders' Agitation.
Meanwhile, a group of shareholders headed by Mr. Carlisle had been agitating for the alteration of the management with a view to money being earned for dividends.

That change has now been brought about, and the new chairman, Mr. R. M. Holland Martin, the banker, has intimated to the shareholders that "the board could proceed with the task of building up a club that should be not only the best near London, but also remunerative to the shareholders."

That is the crux of the whole situation. Exactly what kind of club will Ranelagh become? It is a question which is being debated by more than 2,000 members who will soon have to decide whether they will continue their membership or resign.

And over this controversy hangs the threat to Ranelagh of the new Socialist rulers of Greater London. Major Harry Barnes, Socialist chairman of the London County Council Housing Committee, has a scheme for taking the lawns and grounds of Ranelagh and Hurlingham for housing purposes.

Depression And Incomes

In figures of astronomical magnitude, the American Department of Commerce as just published a survey of the income of the United States people for the period 1929 to 1932, which is said to be the most complete of its kind ever compiled.

The object of the work is to show approximately the extent to which the legitimate incomes distributed to individuals were affected by the depression. Incomes are classified under four heads: Wages, salaries, dividends, and interest. The totals expressed in dollars would be too unwieldy for useful comparative purposes, but their last analysis shows that during the period under review incomes fell forty per cent. below the 1929 level, of which loss wage-earners suffered sixty per cent. Since the figures apply only to the first years of the depression, in which the fall was progressive, nothing else was to have been expected. When consumption first failed to keep pace with production and the factories began reducing hands, their overhead machinery was, for a time, kept intact. And when, in due course, reduction in the executive and clerical staffs followed they would at the beginning be on a relatively smaller scale than amongst the manual workers. But were the figures for 1933 available they would tell a still more dismal story for both sections. So, too, with incomes from dividends and interest. During the first onset of the depression these held their ground, obviously from the same cause as that which eased the fall for men in the salaried ranks. There were reserves of undivided profits to keep up payments of dividends and interest for a while; but when that source had been drained dry, the plight of the people living on their investments became worst of all. The report says that though "incomes from dividends and interest remained fairly steady during the first years of the depression, after 1930 they declined more than wages." This stands to reason. For if a business continued working on a scale no matter how reduced, it would have to employ a certain number of hands and pay them wages, profit or no profit. But when no profit was being earned and all reserves had been used up, dividends had to stop. If by the end of 1930 the effect of this had been to make the fall in investment incomes relatively heavier than "in those derived from personal exertion, by now the disparity must be still greater. Latest returns gave the number of unemployed workers in America at eleven millions, though there have been reductions since. There is nothing to show the number of people who, through the cessation of dividends, are reduced practically to the same position. But amongst those who had no other means of livelihood than returns from their investments enough appears in the report to make it plain that there is now more distress in America among them than in any other class. There is a popular delusion that the dividends of public companies are all distributed amongst wealthy people. But anyone taking the trouble to examine the share lists of banks and big financial institutions, as well as industrial concerns, will find that the average number of shares individual-ly held is small. Even allowing that the same person may hold stock in different companies, it is equally true that many are unable to afford an investment in more than one, and it has to be a comparatively small investment even so. The cessation of dividend paying therefore has not hit America's rich men only, it has aggravated the effects of the depression for all classes. The moral of it all is of universal application. As society is constituted, it shows that capital and labour must stand or fall together. In America, as they revolved together in the few delirious years of the post-war boom, they now suffer together in the reactionary slump. Neither the wage rate nor the dividend rate is to be determined by any fixed standard. The real wage rate is what the total amount of wages earned would yield to each worker, were all employed. A high rate for some and no wages at all for others would mean a low rate for the mass. The same applies to dividends. It is not that higher profits are being earned by individual companies but that more companies are earning profits. This represents a real rise in dividend incomes, just as every worker drafted out of the ranks of the unemployed into the ranks of the wage-earners puts up the average wage for the workers as a whole. And so are seen London Stock Exchange prices rising from the depression level "pari passu" with the diminishing registration of unemployed workers. This indicates that the return to prosperity in Britain is on consistent lines. And it is all the more satisfactory because whatever progress is made is not the result of any meretricious aids such as the dollar juggling by which, in America, the value of labour and commodities is sought to be put up by putting down the value of the tokens given in exchange for them.

HERE, THERE, EVERYWHERE

First Dominion Embassy?

If General Hertzog carries out his reported intention of establishing South African Embassies in Paris and Berlin, he will be establishing a Dominion precedent. There are at present no Dominion Embassies.

South Africa has Ministers in Rome and Washington, and Canada in Paris and Washington.

The Irish Free State has Ministers in Washington, Paris, and Berlin.

Australia's only Minister abroad is Mr. Bruce, in London.

In Paris she is represented by a High Commissioner, and in Washington by a Commissioner.

Transatlantic Lotteries

The movement for legalising lotteries in the United States gathers force. It always does this after the draw for the Irish Sweep, to which and to other foreign lotteries American citizens have contributed heavily in the last three years.

They spend still more on lotteries at home. In these small-money enterprises, now dominated by gangsters and racketeers, conservative estimates put the annual receipts at U.S.$4,000,000,000.

Door-To-Door Racket

The favourite lottery is a gamble on numbers. It has several forms, known variously as "Policy," "Numbers," "Treasury," "Guaranty."

As the Post Office may not be used for lottery tickets the whole racket is conducted on a house-to-house "cavass." No printed tickets are required.

The player writes on a slip of paper his combination of numbers and his name and address. "Collectors" call for the slips and for the cash. A draw is then made and the winning combinations of numbers are announced.

A slip-holder may be lucky enough to hold a winning number. His good fortune does not always extend to collecting the prize.

The system is rife with abuses, the only efficient part of it being the "cavass," which brings with the school-children and overlooks no section of the population.

To end the racket several States, including Maine, have now drafted Bills to permit lotteries under State supervision.

BUDAPEST'S BRAVE FACADE

POVERTY MUST BE KEPT CONCEALED

LIFE IN A PROUD CAPITAL

(By Noel Panter.)

Budapest. Outwardly Budapest has changed but little in recent years. There are still cafes open all night to which revellers repair in the small hours after a night of cabaret-tasting.

In them you may partake of the celebrated kaposztaleves (a kind of Sauerkraut soup) which is not only an effective thirst quencher but is reputed to exercise a soothing influence on the digestion.

Fashionably dressed Hungarian women still parade the Vaci ucca (Budapest's Bond-street) at about midday and in the afternoons. As they stroll along, seemingly without a care in the world, smiling at friends and acquaintances, or eagerly discussing the latest society gossip, you would not dream that only this morning, perhaps, the antique dealer paid an absurdly diminutive sum for the last piece of valuable period furniture, that the luxurious flat near the Parliament House or the large villa in Hűvösvölgy was exchanged only last week for a two-roomed apartment looking on to a dingy yard in a cheap quarter of the town.

The justly-famed beauty of Hungary's women is not only a beauty of countenance. It is—even in the middle age—a beauty of the figure, and carries with it a breath-taking charm of manner.

Rush To Flats

Your Hungarian wife never becomes careless of her appearance. She may spend, perhaps, two hours over her toilet. But when she emerges into the morning sunshine it is almost impossible to tell whether her own white hand or that of nature has wrought the fairer picture.

Despite the craze in these hard times for so-called bachelor flats, consisting of one or two rooms with kitchen and bath-room, there are still large establishments where old customs and traditions are maintained. The hospitality of the home—not that of the cafe or the restaurant—is then extended to friends, many of whom are to-day unable to return it. When it is decided to hold a reception, much thought is given to the issuing of invitations, and the number of acceptances is carefully checked.

Gone are those spacious days when it was estimated that every invited guest would bring his own party, and when the capacity of the larder and the wine cellar was almost unlimited. An extra cook and kitchen helps are engaged. The pates, the cakes, the viands once ordered from the caterers without thought of the cost are now prepared at home.

The great night arrives. At about eight o'clock the motor-cars begin to draw up. See! There is X, alighting from a taxi. Over his dinner jacket he wears one of those Hungarian greatcoats, narrow at the waist but full and flowing from the hips, with elaborate black cord buttons and other embellishments.

Tragedy Brought Home

Once a wealthy landed proprietor in Transylvania, he now lives in a furnished suburban dwelling. It is nearly three miles distant, yet he pays the taxi-man only sixpence. His poverty must not be flaunted before the world, so he has engaged a taxi for the final hundred yards of his journey, the remainder being accomplished by tram-car.

Inquisitive servants peeping from the windows near the tradesmen's entrance observe late comers furtively wiping their muddy shoes before ascending the steps to the main doorway. They have come on foot, yet they complain apologetically to their hosts that "the police should really prohibit these decrepit and slowly-moving taxis."

Meanwhile, from the taxi rank nearby, some of the drivers, stamping with their feet in the cold, gaze wistfully at the lighted windows and imagine the gay scene behind the warm plush curtains of the drawing-room and salons. With scenes such as this a few among them are familiar.

Although in Budapest there are no Russian counts who have done the chauffeur's livery, there are many engineering graduates, of Hungarian universities who can find no other means of earning a living. Their tragedy is sometimes brought home to one in unexpected ways.

Only a few nights ago one of my Hungarian friends said, bantering-ly, to the taxi driver who stood at the open door awaiting our instructions, "Lead me along new paths, Oh, Lucifer!" It was a quotation from the play, "The Tragedy of Man," by Imre Madach. With only an instant's reflection the taxi-man—a quondam prizeman in literature—took up the cue and quoted Lucifer's answer. It seemed to me that he climbed somewhat sadly to his driving seat.

"Closing Down"

Many are the stories told of the financial depression in Budapest. Perhaps the most apt is that of the American tourist who commented upon the business enterprise of one particular Hungarian firm, which appeared to have three or four branches in every street. How was it, he asked, that this concern could flourish when so many other undertakings were reputed to be registering a loss?

His inquiry caused much mystification in Hungarian quarters, until it was realised that the name of the "firm" which he had seen placarded on so many shop windows was Megszernit. Being translated, this means "Closing Down."

One of the most remarkable features of present-day Budapest is the number of flats that seem to be let. It is the custom to affix notices bearing the particulars of available flats to the main entrance doors on the street level. There are few residential buildings in the town that do not flaunt two or three such placards.

Yet often the concierge exhibits no disposition to show these flats. If one insists of viewing them, one is met by hostile stares. The tenants have, you see, no intention of moving out. They have given notice merely in order to press down the rent.

Often they succeed, but sometimes an obstinate landlord will prove adamant. Thus, every inspecting visitor is a potential danger.

The Hungarians are blessed, or afflicted, with an almost insatiable curiosity. Sitting in the cafes they will read not only the newspapers of their own country, but those of nearly every other European State. But there are many, alas, who cannot afford to pay the eight-pence or tenpence which is the price demanded for a cup of coffee in the good-class cafes where patrons may sit for several hours devouring the papers and periodicals published in all the capitals from Bucharest to Barcelona.

"KANGAROO" TERROR IN TENNESSEE

15-Hour Hunt Over Mountains

PROVES TO BE A LYNX

Chattanooga, Tennessee.

A 15-hour hunt over Signal Mountain ended in the killing of a large long-legged mountain lynx believed to be the "kangaroo" that terrorized the Hamburg community near South Pittsburg, Tennessee. Mountain hunters fired buckshot into the animal as it crouched in a tree.

The "kangaroo" was charged with slaying and partially devouring dogs, sheep, and other animals and causing Negroes to stay home every night. Even as it fell from the tree with the death-wound it killed one of the hounds in the pack that chased it.

Weighing more than 40 pounds, the animal measured 50 inches in length, had a short tail, slightly tufted ears, and a spotted coat. Its long legs indicated that it might have travelled with leaping strides, giving credence to the kangaroo-like hops ascribed to the strange marauder of the Hamburg community. Reuter.

REFORMS FOR SOUTH AFRICA'S DEFENCES

£340,000 To Be Spent On Improvements

MECHANISED ARTILLERY EXPERIMENT

Cape Town. Further details of his ambitious plans to modernise and revolutionise South Africa's military defences were given at Mr. O. Pirow, Minister of Defence, in the House of Assembly. Only lack of money, he indicated, had prevented these reforms being put into force long ago.

The defence vote appropriated £170,000 for the artillery, machine gun and aircraft replacement funds, and a further £170,000 will be asked for in the main estimates this year. For coastal defence £175,000 will be needed, largely to bring coastal artillery up to date. A battery of artillery will be mechanised—as an experiment—at a cost of £18,000.

A sum of £79,000 is being set aside for trench-mortars and machine guns. Mr. Pirow's object being to create twelve rural regiments of the active citizen force, each regiment to consist of one headquarters company and one support company comprising two platoons of machine guns and one platoon of trench mortars.

About £90,000 will be spent on building or buying aircraft. There will be one general purpose squadron in addition to a squadron of high-speed bombing fighters formidable weapons with a cruising speed of 200 miles an hour, carrying four or five hundred-weight of bombs and liberally equipped with machine guns. There is a prospect of much of this money being spent in South Africa.—Reuter.

MYSTERIOUS GAS ATTACKS

Countryside Terrorised In Virginia

Fincastle, Virginia. A series of stealthy attacks with gas on widely scattered homes in this section—made by a person whose identity is a mystery—is baffling officers of two counties.

The "gasser" has released a nauseating gas in at least six homes, caused illness to several persons and given the residents of this mountainous section a case of "nerves" during the past month or more.

A woman is believed to be linked with the series of attacks. Investigators have found the imprint of a woman's foot in two instances. But that is all that the officers know about the strange attacks.

Even the motive and the exact nature of the gas used are mysteries.

In his latest attack, the gasser released gas in a home in Carvin's Cove, and then vanished without a trace as officers of two counties sought to trap him by converging from two directions.

Other traps have been set and officers have hidden at different points on nights when it was anticipated further attacks would occur, but the perpetrators of the crime always eluded capture.

Dr. S. F. Driver of Troutville, who investigated one of the recent attacks, was quoted by Boteourt County officers as saying he was convinced chlorine gas was used in that instance.—Reuter.

HOLLYWOOD GOES PRUDENT.

Reckless Spending Days Are Over

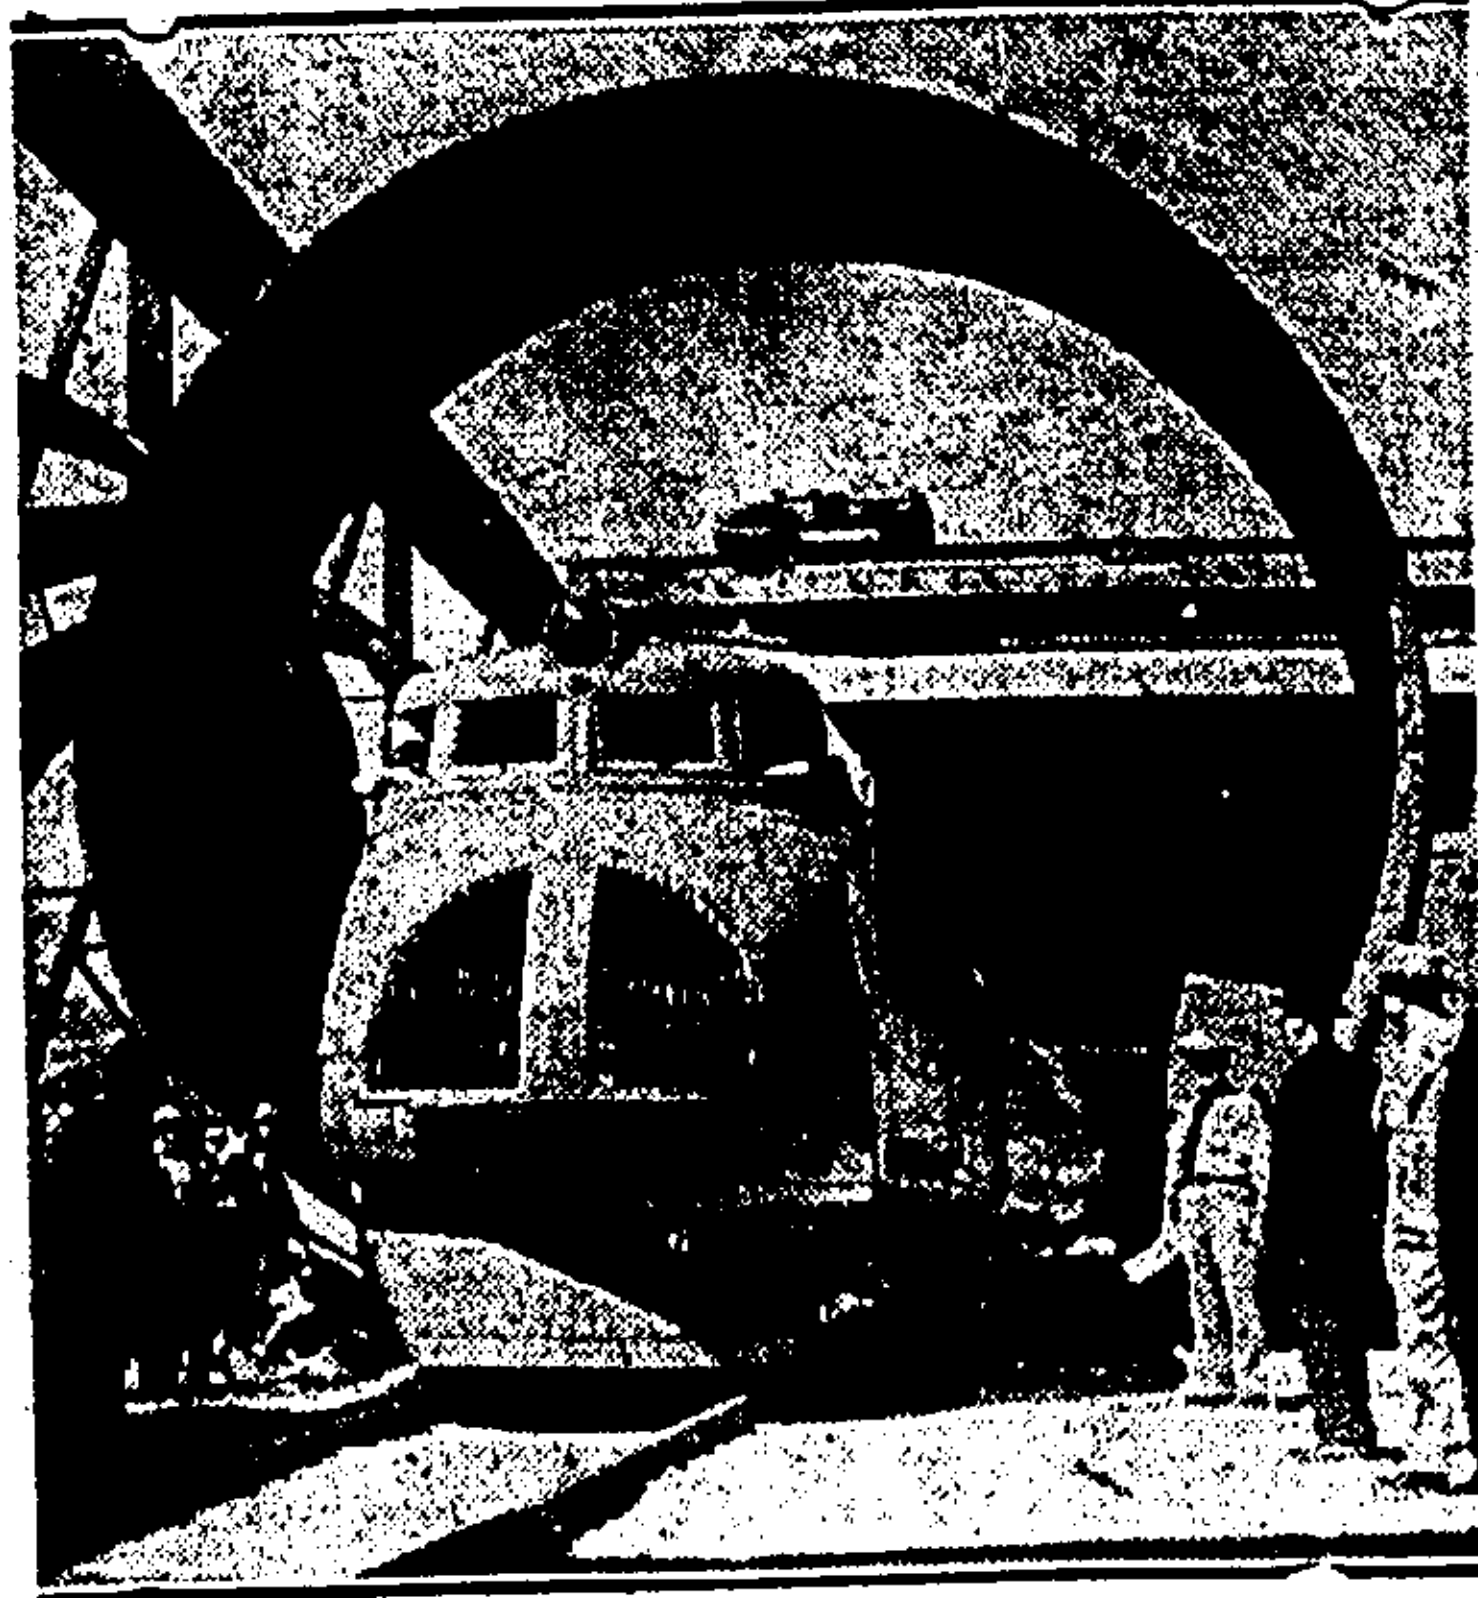

Hollywood. Film stars are saving up. They have learned a lesson from the past few years and the days of reckless spending are over.

John Barrymore, long referred to as a lavish spender, is understood to be quietly buying up property in Beverly Hills.

Richard Barthelmess has become a heavy investor in real estate.—Reuter.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT "SENT BY GOD"

Greek Dignitary's Tribute

WORLD'S FUTURE LIES IN AMERICA

Augusta, Georgia. President Roosevelt "is a man sent by God to help His people, as near divinity as a temporal ruler can possibly be."

Thus has Archbishop Anthanagoras, the highest dignitary of the Greek Orthodox Church in the Western Hemisphere, described America's President.

"Not only is the President 'the right man in the right place, but in the right country as well' the Archbishop said.

Here visiting Greek congregations throughout the country, he added that: "I say this because America has a great mission in the world. Through President Roosevelt new ideas will be imposed in the rest of the world. The world must look to America for future progress of civilisation, not to Europe. Europe is too old to have new ideas and the old standards will not do."—Reuter.

POLICEMEN MUST BE "HE-MEN"

No Wandering Round In Shirt Sleeves

New York. No matter how hot it gets in New York next summer, the traffic policemen will not be allowed to perform their duties in their shirt sleeves, according to the new Police Commissioner, John F. O'Ryan.

The men will "have to stand up like he-men and take it—and like it," he stated. "The appearance of the Washington police on a summer's day is positively a disgrace to the Capital and there'll be none of that here," he added.

The Washington police are allowed to direct traffic without their coats on in the hot weather. In New York last summer, when Police Commissioner Bolan was in charge, the traffic "cops" were permitted to do the same.—Reuter.

RIVAL "BULLDOG DRUMMONDS."

Hollywood v. Elstree

London. Hollywood and Elstree are both filming sequels to Sapper's famous novel, "Bulldog Drummond."

Hollywood's subject is "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," with Ronald Colman and Loretta Young.

B. L. P.'s story is "The Return of Bulldog Drummond," with Ralph Richardson and Joyce Kennedy.

The two films should prove an interesting comparison.—Reuter.

PRINCE GEORGE AS GOVERNOR-GENERAL

South African Chief's Suggestion

CONFERENCE FOLLOWS VISIT

Ladysmith, (Natal). Native chiefs in the Klip River district gathered at a special conference presided over by Major C. L. R. Harries, District Native Commissioner, to voice their thanks and express pleasure at Prince George's visit.

Chiefs Mbekwa was of the opinion that the Prince should be requested to reside in South Africa, preferably as Governor-General, by which means closer contact would be established between the Natives and the King.

"We natives rarely see a direct representative of our King, and the appointment of one of the King's sons in the capacity of Governor-General of South Africa would bring joy to the hearts of the Native people," said the aged chief.—Reuter.

To-day's Short Story.

BITTER WATERS

By Luigi Pirandello.

VERY few people that morning in the Pump Room grounds. The month was September, and the season was nearing its end. Leaves were falling from the high plane trees, and the autumn air had a sting to it. On two separate benches sat two men, each before a little table. One, an anemic youth with a pale face, yellow face, looked pitifully thin in his smart grey suit, newly pressed, that hung on his bony limbs in a sort of zigzag. The other was a huge man in the fifties. His suit of string-coloured linen was bunched and wrinkled, except where his colossal fatness stretched it to bursting-point. Perched on his bald head was a shapeless panama.

Each was holding a glass, filled with the nauseous water from the spring.

The enormous man's eyelids drooped on his eyes; he seemed to be stunned by the frightful noises he had emitted in the night; he had the round, satiated face of a Father-Abbot. The thin young man seemed cold, and from time to time shivered.

Neither was in a hurry to drink—each seemed looking to the other for a lead. At last they raised their glasses simultaneously, and sipped—and their faces contracted in the same grimace.

"Liver, eh?" said the fat man suddenly. "Hepatic colic, eh?"

The hearing was adjourned until Monday afternoon.

Pardon the question, are you married?"

"No. Why?" said the youth, with a painful crumpling of his face that passed for a smile.

"Oh-er-nothing! Just an idea—in the air. But cheer up, if you aren't married you'll be cured."

"Perhaps you suffer from liver?" said the youth quick-wittedly, smiling painfully as before.

"No, no," said the fat man seriously. "I used to have a liver, then I'd a wife. Now—God be thanked—my wife's left me, so I'm cured. She left me in this very place. Since then I have drunk these waters for thirteen years consecutively, out of gratitude. Excuse my asking, at what hour yesterday did you arrive?"

"At night."

"Ah, I thought so. If you'd arrived in the day you'd already have heard of me."

"I—have heard of you?"

"Yes. I'm a personage here. I'm famous. In the cafes, in the pensions and hotels, at the chemists, on the piazza, everyone talks of me. I know it, and like it—in fact, that's why I come. Where are you staying?"

Oh, at the Pension Suisse? Very well. At luncheon to-day the guests will tell you my story. Well now, if you'll allow me, I'll cut in first, and tell it to you myself."

Heaving his great bulk with difficulty from his bench and holding his glass very carefully, he crossed laboriously over to the thin youth and let himself down heavily on the bench beside him.

"My name's Cambie," began the fat man. "Bernardo Cambie. They call me 'Fat Bernardo,' because I'm fat. Have a sip. I'll sip too."

They sipped, their faces contracting in the usual grimace, which, however, turned into a smile; they looked at each other affectionately.

"You're very young," said the fat man, "and very lively. Now the story I'll tell you will be a better medicine than this filthy water, which taste horrible but doesn't do good. If it did good—but no, as you're taking the cure you'd better have faith in it."

"To continue. From my youth up the word 'marriage' has always turned my stomach. When I hear that word I begin to—Yes, sir! And if I see a honeymoon couple or hear that a friend is to be married—the same effect. It's cause and effect."

"You'll have heard, of course, about the cholera outbreak in Naples—about the year you were born? Well, my father, who was in business, with his usual luck found himself in Naples that very year. I was there, too, living with my father and mother. I had a good poet, and though I lived at home I rented a tiny flat. There was a girl."

"Carlotta. Carlotta was her name. Her father was a usurer; an unfrocked priest. Carlotta had escaped from home because of quarrels with her rascally family. She seemed a nice little thing, and perhaps was—then."

"Excuse my asking, but are you religious? Just more or less? Well, the same as me. But my mother, on the contrary, was tremendously religious, and when the cholera epidemic broke out she thought it had been sent on purpose for me—to punish me; and she demanded that I should marry this girl."

"I assure you I'd never have done it, never!—If Carlotta hadn't taken the cholera and been about to die. I rushed for a priest, and married her—to save her soul. And then what happened? Why, a miracle. She seemed dead, but she recovered."

"Have another sip."

"Fortunately, though Carlotta recovered, her rascally family—father, mother and three brothers—all died. Fortunately and unfortunately. As the sole survivor Carlotta became rich: she inherited some forty thousand lire, the fruit of her father's noble profession. Not only was she now a wife, but a wife with money. Result: she changed character from one day to another."

FOOD AND HOME ECONOMICS

ECONOMICAL DISHES CAN BE TASTY

'Thrifty' Foods Essential To Good Health.

THREE RECIPES RECOMMENDED

'Thrifty' is no longer considered synonymous with 'saving' but is interpreted as wise spending.

The lower the income, the higher is the percentage of it which goes for food. The richer people are, the more they can afford to add rare viands such as caviar and out-of-season fruits and vegetables to the basic menus. The interesting thing is that after a certain point the extra money goes solely for luxury and not for food value. The wealthy woman has to be as thrifty as the one less well-to-do if she is to be certain that her children are supplied with the foods essential to health.

There are lots of recipes which have stood the test of time because they are thrifty in the best sense of the word. They cost little in actual cash and they provide foods necessary for good living. A few of these recipes are given below.

Browned Beef.

2 pounds beef (round).
1 cup flour.
4 tablespoons fat.
1 onion (sliced).
2 cups stock.
1 cup tomato juice.
1 bay leaf.
1/2 teaspoon pepper.
2 teaspoons salt.
3 carrots (sliced).
Cut beef into one-inch cubes. Roll in flour and brown in fat with the onion. Add other ingredients. Cover and simmer for an hour and a half.

Bran Muffins.

2 tablespoons shortening.
1/2 cup sugar.
1 egg (well beaten).
1 cup sour milk.
1 cup bran.
1 cup flour.
1 teaspoon baking powder.
1/2 teaspoon soda.
1/2 teaspoon salt.
Cream the shortening and sugar, add egg and sour milk. Add bran and let soak until most of the moisture is taken up. Sift flour with baking powder, soda and salt and add to first mixture, stirring only until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin tins two-thirds full and bake in a moderate oven (400° F.) for 20 to 25 minutes.
Note: If sweet milk is used instead of sour milk, omit 1/2 teaspoon of soda and use 3/4 teaspoon baking powder. Raisins or dates may be added if desired. A small slice of apple, sprinkled with cinnamon and sugar, placed on top of the muffin batter before baking, makes a delicious variation of the recipe.

Mock Drum Sticks.

Mock drum sticks are rolled pieces of veal, beef or pork fastened with a skewer. They resemble chicken legs.
2 cups corn flakes.
2 eggs (beaten slightly).
1 teaspoon salt.
6 mock drum sticks.
(About 1 1/2 pounds meat, cut 1/2-inch thick).
Roll corn flakes into fine crumbs. Dip drum sticks in egg to which salt has been added. Roll again in corn flakes. Sauté quickly. Add 1/2 cup water. Cover and place in a moderate oven (350° F.) for 45 to 60 minutes, basting when necessary.

Tiffin Appetisers.

Little rounds of toast, or bread fried in butter, spread with freshly made or bought anchovy paste, seasoned to taste with chopped onion, parsley and cheese and moistened cream.
Grooved celery stalks, filled with any cream or lacte cheese, seasoned to taste with minced onion and any piquant sauce, and moistened cream or unsweetened canned milk.
(Unsweetened biscuit, spread with any fish paste, some chopped celery, some chopped onion.

Left-Overs Take On New Zest Served In These Sandwiches

When the children come trooping home at noon time with ravenous appetites, why not satisfy their hungry demands with a hot, substantial, savory sandwich, one which will not only provide all the nourishment they require but be inviting and economical as well. And when friends drop in for Sunday night supper, the savory hot sandwich answers the problem of something easy and attractive to serve.

Left-over meats, odds and ends of cheese, gravies, sauces and all sorts of remnants of left-over food all fill in splendidly in preparing savory sandwiches. And, since it is considered quite the thing to use toast in place of bread in their use to excellent advantage. Graham bread, Boston brown bread, making the stale slices are all usable for hot sandwich making and add variety as well.

The remnants of the Sunday roast of beef can be made into an appetizing hot sandwich. Chop the meat very fine, add the gravy to it and add this mixture to a few shreds of green pepper and minced onion browned in a little fat. Heat to the boiling point and add half a teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce or tomato catsup to taste. Serve on hot toast with spicy pickles.

Hot chicken sandwiches are delicious and can be made in several ways. If you had chicken with biscuits and gravy for Sunday dinner, a very easy sandwich is made by removing the meat from the bones, reheating it in the gravy and serving it on the biscuits which have been split and toasted.

The remnants of roast chicken or any variety of poultry work up daintily in the following recipe.

Hot Chicken Sandwich

One cup finely chopped chicken, 1-2 cups milk, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 tablespoon mayonnaise, 3 drops onion juice, 1 teaspoon caper, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon white

TABLE SERVICE HINTS.

When you want to give a party, serve the following in the following in the following way:—
Mayonnaise—In half lemon shells, notched round the rim with scissors.

Oranges or Mandarines—With a cross-cut over skin at stem ends, and the skin loosened, and slightly pulled back to form four curved "petals."

Grapes—Arrange in fruit dish or basket lined with real or artificial foliage. If not serving finger bowls pass a vase of tepid water round with grapes and scissors so that people can dip grapes in water before eating them. This is better than washing the grapes before serving.

COPPER FOR CHROMIUM HOUSEHOLD ARTICLES

"Brushed" copper is being used household articles such as brushes, trays, and lamps. It looks as if it had been highly polished, as if it had been highly polished and then lightly misted over with steam. It has a lovely rosy tint.

Tasty Additions To Meat Courses.

Serve Yorkshire pudding with roast beef, dumplings with stew, and fried apples with pork to give your meat course just the right touch.

DINING CHAIR OF BIRCH WOOD

Some most comfortable, easy and dining chairs have been made of, highly polished, natural birch wood, on the same principle as the metal tube furniture. Chairs cost from $9.50, and tables of similar design cost from $12.

CURRIED EGGS ON BROWN RICE

New Way Of Preparing Old Dish.

WHETS LAGGING APPETITES

Every home maker knows that her family quickly tires of plain scrambled, boiled or poached eggs and that it's up to her to use imagination in concocting appetizing dishes from the same old ingredients.

Maybe she'll like to rely on a curried dish now and then. There are many such recipes to whet lagging appetites.

One is curried eggs on brown rice. Try making it this way:

Put four tablespoons of butter and four tablespoons of flour in a hot pan and blend them thoroughly. Add two cups of rich milk, salt, pepper and curry powder to taste. When you serve this dish again (that's almost inevitable once you've tasted it), put in about one-half cupful of milk from a coconut. It will give the sauce a different flavour.

Boil one and one-half cups of brown rice in four cups of water until tender. Wash the cooked rice in cold water to remove excess starch and put in a pan covered with wax paper. Set the pan in the oven until the rice is very hot. This makes the grains fluffy.

When ready to serve, place rice on a hot serving dish, cover with whole boiled eggs (two to a person) and pour the curry sauce over them.

SERVE SALAD DAILY

Serve at least one salad a day. Beets and hard boiled eggs diced, served with hot biscuits, make a delicious lunch.

CHEESE COOKIE SOMETHING NEW AND DELICIOUS

Frosting Adds Touch As Does Sprinkling Of Chopped Nuts.

Here is a cookie which is very simple to execute, yet of delicious flavour when finished.

COTTAGE CHEESE COOKIES

1 cup sugar.
1/4 cup cottage cheese, well drained.

1 egg.

1 teaspoon baking powder, either kind.

1 cup shortening.

3 cups cake flour.

1 teaspoon lemon juice.

Grated rind of one lemon.

1/2 teaspoon cinnamon.

Cream shortening, add sugar, lemon juice, grated rind and cinnamon and cream together very well. Add cottage cheese which has been forced through a fine wire sieve and mix thoroughly.

Sift flour, measure, add baking powder and sift together twice.

Add flour mixture to first mixture.

Blend well. Shape into balls about one inch diameter and bake on greased cookie sheet, or shallow pan.

These cookies will not run, so they can be placed one inch apart on the sheet or pan. Use a 375 degree oven and bake them fifteen to twenty minutes. When baked they may be dipped into your favorite frosting and rolled in chopped nuts or coconut.

TO MAKE COCKTAILS INVITING.

Garnishing Hints.

If you want to make your fruit cocktails even more inviting, here's an idea: Top them with bits of delicately coloured whipped cream, toasted coconut, a sprig of mint, perfect whole berries, red cherries or nut meats.

KEEP HONEY IN DARK

Honey should be kept in the dark. If exposed to the light it will granulate.

"Now listen, Perhaps—how shall I say it?—perhaps I may seem a bit queer to you. I have a sort of philosophical spirit, that makes me argue. But let me go on.

"Do you believe, sir, that there are only two genders, the masculine and the feminine? No, sir, there are more. A wife is a gender in herself, and so is a husband. And in marriage the wife is always the gainer. She encoaches. She encoaches on the masculine gender, and the husband loses in proportion. And take it from me, dear sir, he loses pretty heavily.

"You laugh? Now the husband, in the wife's eyes, is no longer a man; so there's no fun in pleasing him. So in the house she looks like a scare-crow, and lies in bed with her hair in curlers and her face smeared with grease. And if the husband should venture to protest, she is capable of answering: 'But it's all for you! For me?' Why, of course, for you—for people to say when they see us together: 'What a lucky man to have a beautiful wife!' And the husband (you see, he's no longer a man) says nothing, when he really ought to shout at her: 'So you make yourself hideous at home, for me, so that people in the street may say: 'What a lucky man!' So I've got to be envied into the bargain! Thank you, thank you, my dear—how good of you!'

"In marriage the wife may do as she likes, but the husband, no. 'But whatever the husband did would be wrong. What a wife wants, you see, is admiration—a romantic aura of admiration that shall wrap her whole life around deliciously. Now the wretched husband, how can he provide this aura? He sees his wife with a stomach or tooth-ache, or looking like a devil with her head bristling with curlers, or with down-at-heel shoes and without her corsets, or with her face shiny with grease. But strangers can provide this aura—people who don't know her; and it's for those that she decks herself out and uses her arts. And when a stranger's eyes light up greedily then a sweet languor invades her being, and her blood begins to flow. Well, with a virtuous wife that's enough. I'm talking now of virtuous wives, in fact of the perfect, the immaculate ones—the others aren't interesting to talk about.

"Let's have another glass!... Courage! 'She wasn't like that at first, Carlotta. She only became like that when we were married—that is, when I began to respect her. (As my wedded wife I was bound in duty to respect her). Perhaps she didn't like being respected. I don't know. But I know that the sight of me, turned suddenly into a model husband, got on her nerves most frightfully. And our lives began to be hell. She, sulky, touchy, restless; I, patient and forbearing, partly from fright, and partly from the knowledge that I had committed the most awful folly, and must take the consequences. I puzzled and puzzled my brains to discover what she wanted. But I never could guess. And I defy anyone to guess. My wife wanted, sir, to have been born a man! And she was angry with me because she had been born a woman!

"One day I asked her: 'Tell me, if you'd been born a man what would you have been?' 'Opening her eyes very wide, she answered: 'A crook!'

"Good! 'And I'd never have married, never, never!'

"Thank you, my dear. 'Oh, make no mistake about it! I'd never have married, so as not to make a prisoner of an unfortunate woman!'

"Oh, so you feel yourself a prisoner. 'Feel myself? Feel myself? But what am I? What else? 'Well, of course, after a year or so of matrimony, I developed a liver. 'For six years running I passed from cure to cure, getting thinner and more miserable; even the other liver patients pitied my condition. 'The remedy I found here.

"I came to take these waters, accompanied by my wife. We stayed at the Suisse, just as you're doing now. On arriving I sent at once for a doctor to prescribe what waters I should take, and which would be better, douches or baths. 'The doctor proved to be young; a dark, tall, handsome young man, with a fine muscular body and a military air. I was told later that he'd been in the Army—in the Army Medical—that he'd had an affair with a typist, had been obliged by her father to marry her, had been forced to retire from the Army, and had come here, with his wife and child, to practise. Some eight months later his wife and child died, practically together. His loss, when he visited me, was already three years old, but he was still in the deepest black, like a beautiful crow.

"Imagine the advertisement!—that great sacrifice, all for love, so cruelly rewarded by fate!... I assure you those two misfortunes were carved on his whole person. His success was enormous—not a woman in the place but would have jumped to console him if he'd given her the chance. But he treated them like dirt.

"Well, this doctor tapped me all over and examined me very carefully and prescribed a treatment: three glasses of the waters for the first days, and then four, and baths and douches alternately. He was just going out of the room when he pretended to notice my wife.

"And you, too?" he said coldly. "No, no," she replied, looking down her nose.

"All the same," he said, "allow me."

"And he came up to her and with his left hand raised her chin most delicately, and with the first finger of his right gently lifted an eyelid.

"Slightly anaemic," he said. "My wife had gone very pale, as though that hasty diagnosis had already made her anaemic, and with a short, nervous laugh she shrugged her shoulders.

"I feel very well," she said. "So much the better," he said, very seriously.

"And with great dignity he took his leave.

"Well, whether it was the waters, or the sulphur-baths, or the douches, or whether (more likely) it was the sweetness of the Tuscan countryside and the soft, balmy air of this place, I certainly did feel better from the first moment. I decided to stay for a month or more, and even rented a small house near the Pension Suisse, a house standing on a little hill with the whole valley stretched beneath it and a view of the two lakes of Chiassi and Montepulciano.

"Then—but perhaps you've already guessed—in a very short time my wife began to feel ill.

"She didn't call it anaemia, because the doctor had given it that name; she called it a tired feeling at her heart, a sense of something weighing on her chest, that hindered her breathing. Knowing very well what she wanted, I looked as ingenious as I could and begged her to call in a doctor. Of course she refused, furious.

"From day to day she grew worse, always refusing to consult a doctor. I hardened my heart and ceased to urge it. At last, one morning, unable to stand it any longer, she suggested of her own accord that I should call in a doctor—but not, please, no, she really couldn't stand that. She would see, she said, the doctor attached to the Pump Room—a certain Dr. Berri, old, asthmatic, shaggy, bear-eyed, already half—now quite—retired to the Other World.

"My dear," said I, playing up to her, 'what nonsense! Why Dr. Berri? That poor old fellow's quite on the shelf! Nobody sends for Berri any more. And besides, how rude to Dr. Loero, who, after all, has behaved with the greatest courtesy—I should be sorry to treat him rudely!'

"It was true; Dr. Loero had behaved with the greatest courtesy. Every day when we arrived at the Pump Room he would greet us with his proud manner, and express his pleasure at the improvement in my liver, and stroll beside me in the park. To my wife he was always correct—nothing more. He bothered very little about her—then. She chewed the cud of her wrath, but in silence.

"Then, after a week or two they began to argue. They argued on the eternal question of man and woman, the wrongs of society, etc. It was a subject that exasperated me more than you can possibly imagine—my wife and I in our seven years of marriage had talked of practically nothing else. What I did enjoy, however, was to hear my own arguments produced by the doctor with all the salt and pepper of scientific authority! When I had used them my wife used to cover me with insults, but with the doctor she was forced to think of appearances. But the bile she wouldn't spit out gave a fine flavour to her words.

"I was hoping, after these arguments, that the disease of the heart would improve. Not at all! It grew worse from day to day—a sign (don't you think?) that she had other arguments in reserve for the doctor! And now, see what a poor part a husband has sometimes to play! I knew that the doctor she wanted was Dr. Loero, that her dislike of him was a comedy; I knew that her wish to be examined by Berri (that poor, old, asthmatic old fellow) was a comedy!

"The doctor proved to be young; a dark, tall, handsome young man,

MOB STORMS COURT BUILDING

Attempt To Lynch Murderer

CONFESSED HIS CRIME

Sereveport, La.

A crowd of some 3,000 recently attempted to take by storm the Shreveport Court building in order to lynch Fred Lockhart, a prisoner, who confessed to having murdered a girl of sixteen.

Breaking the cordon thrown round the building by the police, who tried in vain to keep the mob in check with the aid of tear gas bombs, 500 attackers succeeded in penetrating the building up to the first floor where, however, they were stopped by the machine-gun squad.

In the meantime, the crowd which remained in front of the Court building subdued the firemen who were summoned to assist the police by cutting their fire-hoses.

Window-panes of the building were shattered by the mob, and the disturbance looked so serious that the Governor was compelled to call in the National Guard to restore order.

Two persons were injured during the clash and numerous arrests were being made.

BRITISH FILM OF SOVIET

"Forbidden Territory"

London.
A new British film organisation is to make the first British talkie with Soviet Russia as the setting.
The picture will be based on the novel "Forbidden Territory" by Dennis Wheatley, and Gerald du Maurier will probably have an important part in it.
It is most unlikely that facilities will be given for filming exterior in Moscow, but it is hoped to film them in Latvia, and the interior will afterwards be made at the Gaumont-British studios.—Reuter.

too; and I knew that her tired heart was a comedy too; and yet I was forced to pretend that I believed in all these things, and go to the trouble and sweat of persuading my wife to do from the beginning!

"Sir, when my wife stretched herself on the bed, and the doctor looked into her eyes as he bent over her, I saw that she was almost in a swoon, on the point of collapsing. . . I saw the disturbance in her eyes and face. I knew her, and couldn't be mis- taken."

"Oh, no, there was no harm in it, of course not—it was merely a medical examination, with the hus- band looking on; my wife was still without shadow of reproach. Then what, I ask you, was the sense of that stupid doctor coming to my house at eleven at night to blurt out in my face what I already knew, had seen clearly with my two eyes and almost touched with my hands? . . .

"Come! It's time for a sip! Cour- age!"

"The thing happened like this: One night I was standing on the balcony of my little house, gazing at the wide valley below me drenched in the moon- light."

"My wife was in bed.
"Sir, you see me here, so gross and fat, and perhaps would never expect that a lovely view by moonlight could affect me. But, believe me, though my body is fat, my soul, on the con- trary, is slim slim diaphanous, a soul with silky golden hair and a sweet limpid little face. And when, in the quiet and solitude of evening, I stand on my balcony with my fat body and great bullock's eyes, my soul grows soft and tender; it sighs with ecstacy at the moon swinging in the sky and at the little ringing of bells made by the grasshoppers scattered in the fields."

"Men by day in the cities and grass- hoppers by night in the fields never cease from their noise. . . A fine profession, a grasshopper's! What are you doing? 'I'm singing.' But why are you singing? But he doesn't know himself why he's singing—he just sings because he must. And all the stars tremble in the sky. A fine profession, too, a star's! They look down into space and tremble and tremble. And do, how I love that moonlight and the stars in the night, who suddenly in the midst of the sweetness breaks into sobs, anguished from afar; he's crying from the sweetness."

"To continue. As I have said, I was gazing at the night, my soul moved by the loveliness, when I began to notice that the air had grown chilly (it was past eleven), when suddenly, long and loud, came a furious knock- ing at my front door. Who could be knocking at that hour?

"It was Dr. Loero.
"My dear sir, in a state you'd hard- ly believe.
"Drunk as a lord."

"I must tell you that just in those days some five or six doctors from different towns of Italy had arrived for the cure, and Dr. Loero and the chemist had got up a dinner in their honour that night at the Hospital of the Green Cross; just there, near the Swiss. A polly affair, as you may think! It wasn't the waters they were drinking. Oh, no. . . Not one of those doctors got home sober."

"But God alone knows why that Dr. Loero should have come to my house, so drunk that he could hardly walk, and that he should have been so kind as to come to my house, to drink to me, but with the moonlight and all the loveliness. . .

"I went down and opened the door. He was swaying, so I had to hold him up. He threw his arms round my neck and kissed me; he said he loved me as a brother, the whole of that evening he had talked of nothing but me, of my poor liver and poor stomach; he had felt so sad thinking of my liver that he felt he must really call and examine me, he said that day, he perhaps wouldn't get to bed tonight. . . Because, you know, he had drunk with me, and had a glass or two. . . I begged him to go home, but he wouldn't hear of it. He asked for a chair in the porch, and when he sat down he began to talk of my wife. He was oh, so fond of her, so very, very fond of her; would I do him the favour of going and waking her? For she, too, that dear little Carlottina, was oh, so fond of him, so very fond of him. Oh, rather, rather, he should just think so! And so on, and so on, always laughing in his scornful way, and trying to wink slyly with an eye half-shut from drink.

"Sir, I ask you now, what ought I to have done? How could I thrash a man who could hardly stand on his feet? My wife, meanwhile, awakened from sleep, was yelling instructions that I was to beat him, was to kick him down the hill. I confess I felt very like doing it. But the poor young fellow didn't know what he was saying; in the blessed unconsciousness of wine he was merely spilling the truth, hounding it merely in my face, meaning no harm. I clutched his collar and jerked him from his seat; drunk or not I felt that I really must do just something—give him just a tiny smack, or perhaps a push. But I had to go very carefully, for he literally couldn't stand up. I go him to the edge of the porch, and there I gave him—yes, I gave him a push. Just a gentle little push, that sent him spinning down the hill."

"Arrived at my room, I found my wife in a fury, absolutely possessed of a devil, pacing up and down in her nightdress. She covered me with the vilest insults; she said that if I'd had the spirit of a man I'd have trampled on the brute, I'd have kicked him down the hill; she said I was a coward with- out the courage of chicken, a hus- band not capable of defending his wife's honour, and in fact a husband who would welcome. . .

"I didn't let her finish. I lifted a hand; I shouted to her to look out, that the beating I'd have given the doctor if he hadn't been drunk I'd give to her instead if she didn't keep quiet. But she didn't. From fury she passed to scoffing. It was easy, she said, for me to bluster with her, a weak woman, when I'd received so graciously a man who'd come to in- sult her. Why didn't I waken her at once? In fact, why did I hesitate? Why not have led him politely to her room? 'You shall challenge him to a duel,' she added, beyond herself with rage. 'You shall send him the chal- lenge to-morrow, or it will be the worse for you!'

"Well, I'd got to the limit, I couldn't stand any more. I told her to shut her mouth and allow me to sleep. I wouldn't challenge anyone, it only not to give her that satisfaction. "But lying awake in the night I thought of it a lot. I didn't know then, and don't know gentlemen can be provoked to a duel by a man too drunk to know what he is saying. I decided to ask advice. I had talked at the Pump Room now and then with a retired major, and I decided to ask this major what I ought to do. But next morning, just as I was starting off, I saw this very major accompanied by another gentleman, coming to my house. There had come in the name of Dr. Loero to ask satisfaction for the way I'd insulted him last night! . . . It seemed that my push had sent him on his nose."

"But considering that the man was drunk! I yelled at these gentlemen. All the worse, they said, I ought to have been especially careful. . . And my wife had nearly eaten me alive be- cause I hadn't beaten him and kicked him down the hill!"

"Well, I accepted the challenge. I went, on hearing it, laughed contemptu- ously, and began at once to pack her trunks, without waiting for the re- sult of the duel, though she knew that the conditions were extremely grave. "The conditions were imposed by me. I was in it, up to the neck, and was determined to do it thoroughly. The duel was to be by pistol, at fif- teen paces. Thinking I would cer- tainly be killed I wrote a letter that night, and I gave it to her, saying, 'If you have the idea the folios of it you are capable of when he finds himself in a possible like that.'"

"I have never handled arms, and I swear that instinctively I shut my eyes when I pulled the trigger. The first two shots were wide. The third was so close that the third went wide too. It was the fourth, the fourth shot—

Getting Away From Politics

Philadelphia.
Mr. Shane Leslie, the Irish bi- ographer and poet, is perfectly frank about why he is in this country. "He told an audience at the Uni- versity of Pennsylvania that "if Irishmen were only more interest- ed in their culture than in politics, I would not have to be lecturing to you."—Reuter.
The British India liner s.s. Tilawa left Singapore on Thursday after- noon, and is due in Hong Kong on Monday afternoon.
(you'll see what a hard-headed fellow that doctor was!) the fourth shot caught him in the head, but missed the bone, and came out behind.
"I thought he was dead. Everyone rushed to him, and I with the rest. Then one of my seconds told me ur- gently to escape. So I jumped into a carriage and took the road to Chius as quick as I could.
"I escaped.
"On the following day I learnt what had happened; and I learnt, too, of something else, which filled me with joy and at the same time with sad- ness—joy for myself and sadness for my adversary, who after being shot in the neck didn't really deserve it.
"On regaining consciousness at the Hospital of the Green Cross Dr. Loero was faced by a beautiful sight: my wife had rushed to his bedside to nurse him! . . .
"Of the wound in his forehead he was cured in a fortnight; of my wife, dear sir, he has not yet been cured! "Come! Shall you drink another glass? Courage!"

In his opinion, the natural process of recovery from the depression must proceed some way further before the nations, as a whole, would be willing to admit that each had sufficient internal strength to take some of the risk, which must inevitably attend the greater freedom of international trade. A larger measure of Home prosperity would in time form the basis of that greater confidence which was a condition precedent to the stabilisation of exchanges, Dr. Coates concluded. —British Wireless Service.
